DANI DECLARES

DIY Marketing Starter Kit

Seven days to one clear offer and real conversations

Fillable on screen. Print-ready. No spam, no invented proof.

Edition 2 draft | We handle the execution.

A seven-day plan for a local service business

What you will do

Pick one service, describe the customer problem it solves, plan three posts, have a few permitted conversations, and record what actually happened. Seven short sessions of 20-40 minutes.

Your seven days

1. Day 1 One offer: say what you sell and to whom in one sentence
2. Day 2 Customer language: collect real questions and objections
3. Day 3 Proof you are allowed to use: photos, results, permissions
4. Day 4 Publish one post: teach, show or offer
5. Day 5 Conversations with people who asked or agreed to hear from you
6. Day 6 Follow up on requested estimates only
7. Day 7 Count real results and choose one change

What this kit does not do

It does not promise leads, rankings, sales, or income. Results depend on your service, area, price, timing and effort. Never invent reviews, expose a client or their home without permission, send bulk unsolicited messages, or advertise a service you cannot deliver right now.

My business

The one service I will promote

My start date

Day 1: one offer, one customer

Start narrow so a stranger understands you in one sentence

Worked example: a home-cleaning business. Replace every example with your own facts.

Service: standard home cleaning, up to 3 bedrooms. Who: busy households and landlords prepping a move-out. Area: the zip codes I can reach in under 30 minutes. Price: from a stated starting price, final quote after a scope check. Contact: the request form on my site.

Service or result I can actually deliver now

Who needs it and why

Service area and limits (zip codes or distance)

Starting price, or "quote after scope check"

Where a customer should contact me

Proof I may share (with permission only)

One-sentence offer: "I help ___ with ___ by ___."

Day 2: customer-language research

Write down what real people say. Do not guess demand

How to use this page

Use comments, direct questions, past customer messages, and public local discussions you are allowed to read. Copy the words people use, not your own summary. Skip anything private or posted in a group whose rules forbid it.

Where I heard it	What the customer said	Need or objection	Permitted next step
Example: question on my page	Do you bring your own supplies?	Wants to know what is included	Answer in a post

The three phrases I keep seeing

Day 3: proof you are allowed to use

Honest, permitted, specific

Before any photo, testimonial or result goes public

- [ ] I took the photo myself or hold a license to use it
- [ ] The customer agreed in writing (text or email counts) to this exact use
- [ ] No faces, addresses, plates, documents or children appear
- [ ] The caption describes only what the photo shows (one room is not "the whole house")
- [ ] I removed or blurred anything private
- [ ] I can show the date and scope if asked

Proof item	Source	Permission on file? (Y/N)	Where I may use it

If you have no proof yet

Use a clearly labeled example of your process, such as a checklist or a before-you-start list you made yourself. Do not stage a scene and present it as a customer result.

Day 4: the three-post plan

Rotate teaching, showing and offering

Post	Opening line	Main point or proof	One call to action
Teach	Example: The easiest first step before a deep clean…		Ask a question
Show	Example: Here is what a finished kitchen visit includes…		Request a quote
Offer	Example: I have openings for this service…		Contact me

Post checklist

One idea per post. One action. The service and price match your offer on Day 1. The photo is yours or licensed. You can fulfill what the post invites people to ask for.

My first post, written out

Caption starters you can finish

Three structures. Fill the lines, then read it out loud

Helpful tip

Hook: name the problem in the reader's words. Tip: one safe, practical step. Invitation: how to ask for help with the service you actually sell.

Hook (the problem)

The tip

Invitation (what to do next)

Behind the scenes

Show the process, not a promise. Name what the visit includes, what it does not, and how you check the result.

What a visit includes

What it does not include

How I check the work

Example captions (adapt, do not copy blindly)

Examples only. Every claim must be true for your business

Teach

Three easy-to-miss spots in a quick clean: door handles, light switches and the area around the sink. Start with what your household touches most, and follow each surface maker's cleaning directions. What do you forget most often?

Show (scope stated)

One space, one change. This is the hall closet after an organizing session: two shelves, one bin per category, labels the client chose. Every space is different; this shows a method, not a guaranteed result. Want help with a similar space? Ask about availability.

Offer

I help busy households with standard home cleaning in my service area. Starting prices are on my request page, and I confirm scope before I quote. Message me for the next open dates.

Check before posting

Replace every example detail with real ones. Remove any claim you cannot prove. Add the price or quote path. Read platform and group rules first.

Day 5: conversations, not spam

Message only people who asked, or who agreed to hear from you

Reply to a question

Thanks for asking. Yes, I do this work in my service area, and I can send the list of what a visit includes. Would you like the details, or an estimate for your space? (Add your own service, area and inclusions below, in your own voice.)

My version of this reply

Safety rules

Honor opt-outs right away. Follow the rules of each platform and local communication laws. Do not scrape contacts, buy lists, or enroll anyone automatically.

Before I send any message

- [ ] The person asked, or agreed to hear from me
- [ ] I used their name and their words, not a template blast
- [ ] I gave one clear next step
- [ ] They can say "no thanks" and I will stop

Day 6: follow-up scripts

Only for estimates people requested

Requested estimate follow-up

Following up on the estimate you asked for. Is there anything you would like clarified? No pressure. I can close this out if the timing is not right.

Past customer (only with their permission to contact them)

Hope the last visit is still working well. If you would like to book again, the request link is on my page. Reply here if you have questions first.

If they say no or stop

Thank you for letting me know. I will not message again. (Then mark them as opted out in your log.)

My own follow-up wording

Weekly action tracker

Count real inquiries, not views

Day	What I posted or did	People who opted in	Reply or outcome
Mon
Tue
Wed
Thu
Fri
Sat
Sun

Inquiry log

One line per real person who asked about the service

Date	How they found me	What they need	Next step and date	Status

Privacy

Keep this log in a private place. Record only what you need to follow up. Delete a person on request.

Day 7: scorecard

Use actual results to decide what to change

Posts published (count and where)

Consented inquiries received

Qualified conversations

Quotes sent or valid checkout attempts

Paid orders (not tests, not $0)

Money actually collected

Simple rates (do by hand)

Inquiries per post = inquiries / posts. Quote rate = quotes / inquiries. Close rate = paid orders / quotes. Average order = money collected / paid orders. A small number of results is a signal to test again, not proof.

What real people responded to

One change I will make next week

Next week and keeping it going

Repeat the loop, improve one thing

Week 2	Post idea	Who I will talk to	Result
Mon
Tue
Wed
Thu
Fri

Monthly habits

- [ ] Update my price and area if either changed
- [ ] Ask one happy customer for permission to share a result
- [ ] Retire a post idea that got no response
- [ ] Read each platform's current rules

A reminder on honesty

Trust is your marketing. Keep claims specific, true and easy to verify.
